PASSAGE 18

To deal with global problems of hunger and malnutrition, natural resource degradation, loss of biodiversity, and rural decline, alternative visions for land use and natural resource management are needed as present practices and systems are making slow or no progress in achieving these objectives. New combinations of policies, institutions, technologies and values are required, linking individual interests and efforts to those of the communities and societies they live in, better balancing the competing aspirations for raising agricultural productivity, ensuring ecological sustainability, and promoting rural vitality.
